

Tanya Morton Application Engineering Manager

I manage the application engineering team at The MathWorks UK. My group provides technical expertise to support science and engineering companies in applying our software to help solve their technical and business issues.

I have an undergraduate degree in maths from Oxford & a PhD in maths from Vanderbilt University. I have been working at The MathWorks since September 2000.

I am working on building a strong team of application engineers who excel in supporting customers in their application of The MathWorks software. I am also further honing my work and life management skills in order to prepare for the arrival of my second child in the summer.
